DDT discovered in arsenal ducks

Tissue analysis of 10 wild ducks collected in a portion of Wheeler National Wildlife Refuge that lies within Redstone Arsenal has shown some with higher average concentrations of DDT than has been found in previous studies of ducks taken within the state of Alabama.

The 10 ducks contained an average DDT level of 28.18 parts per million (ppm). Ducks state wide have averaged 3.5 ppm in tests conducted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The ducks were collected in a back water area of Huntsville Spring Branch as part of a continuing effort by the Army to assess and correct contamination resulting from DDT manufacturing formerly conducted here. The collection point was a sluggish portion of the stream that received industrial waste water from a DDT manufacturing operation over a 23 year period. Manufacturing stopped in 1970.

Several species sampled

The Army took the samples which included mallards, gadwalls and wood duck last January after the waterfowl had been in the area for several months. The highest DDT level indicated was 94.64 parts per million in a female mallard; the lowest, .051 ppm in a male of the same species.

Dave Harris, Redstone Public Affairs Officer, told local news media that because of the limited number of samples and the migratory nature of wild ducks, no firm conclusions can be drawn as to the extent of DDT in area waterfowl. Nonetheless, Harris said, hunters should be aware that ducks frequenting Redstone Arsenal may have higher than average concentrations of DDT. Standards for safe levels of DDT in waterfowl have not been established, he added.

Asked if the ducks are safe to eat, he replied that it is a decision individuals must make for themselves, hunters have known for years that wild ducks have DDT in them. Highest concentrations of DDT occur in

New assault weapon now being developed here

By BOB HUBBARD

Redstone missilemen have yet to go into the knitting business but the Army Missile Research and Development Command (MIRADCOM) is developing a shawl that might become the security blanket for tomorrow's infantryman.

MIRADCOM's avant-garde researchers in the Advanced Systems Concepts Office have under exploratory development a new assault weapon that will enable the soldier to place a hand grenade not on, but inside, a target 200 meters away.

The new weapon, weighing approximately eight-and-a-half-pounds, is called SHAWL (Special Hard-Target Assault Weapon Law).

Utilizing current Viper anti-tank technology and a novel rocket with two warheads in tandem, SHAWL will be a single-tube, throwaway assault weapon giving infantrymen a knockout punch against masonry buildings, bunkers, and even light armored vehicles.

"Until now, the soldier had to run down the street, or toward a bunker, and be accurate enough to lob the grenade inside," said Bill Zecher, SHAWL project engineer in ASCO's Armor-Infantry Systems Division. "No longer. With SHAWL, the soldier doesn't have to run toward the target, or hit a small opening. He can hit anywhere on the building wall, barricade, or vehicle and still get the grenade inside."

When the two-warhead rocket hits the intended target, the front warhead detonates on impact, blowing a hole big enough for the second warhead and spent rocket motor to fly through. A delayed fuze gives the second warhead time to get inside the target before detonation.

Zecher said the difference between SHAWL and anti-tank systems is that any warhead designed to defeat armor gives good penetration but makes a small hole and "... unless the man in the room is directly behind the hole, he probably wouldn't be hurt. With SHAWL, it wouldn't make any difference where he was in the room."

SHAWL, particularly suitable for city fighting against buildings, vehicles, personnel, light armor, bunkers, and similar targets, is one of four concepts competing for the infantry assault role, Zecher said.

"Thus far, we've conducted a low-budget

For some, life is bed of roses

"I never promised you a rose garden." Some people like to go back on their promises, or even pretend that they never made any.

But when George Royer promises you roses, he'll follow through even if it takes him weeks.

Royer, who retired from an engineering job at MIRADCOM Product Assurance in August, lost his watch in a parking lot at RASA while still on the job.

It wasn't just any old watch, either — Royer had bought it eighteen years before in Curacao, a Dutch West Indies colony off the coast of Argentina.

"I didn't think I'd ever get it back," Royer said. "People just aren't honest anymore, and I didn't think anyone would return it."

But Royer got a pleasant surprise when Jean Clark, a supply clerk-typist at RASA, found the watch and gave it back.

He was so pleased that he arranged to bring her a big bouquet of roses though it took him some time to locate her office and then he had to wait for her return from leave.

But at last Royer found Clark and gave her a big bunch of roses.

So remember, the next time you see a lost object lying around, there might be a nice reward in it for you if you return it. If you don't like flowers, there's always candy...

ployees, and if there was any chance a dental rider would be offered in the future.

I checked with Shirley Jackson, Chief of Processing at Civilian Personnel, and found that Blue Cross has offered a dental rider to the Civil Service Commission for several years.

The Commission has rejected the rider because it would make payments too high — perhaps as high as $80 a month, according to Jackson.

However, there are some other government insurance plans that have a dental rider, so if you're especially interested in that you can check with personnel about other policies. Open season for changing your insurance is going on right now.

...TWO SHORT NOTICES: first, the speed limit on Goss Road near the building site of the new Commissary has been lowered from forty mph to twenty-five mph. So watch it, folks, you could be speeding before you know it.

Secondly, about holidays. No, the arsenal will not be closed on the day after Thanksgiving and it will not be closed for an entire week at Christmas-time. I'm sorry about the day after Thanksgiving, but personally I think we need to be open during Christmas week. If we weren't, when would we have the Office Christmas parties?

Givers help hungry with 'love loaves'

The traditional Thanksgiving Ecumenical Service at the Bicentennial Chapel will be celebrated this year by donations to a Christian humanitarian agency whose goal is to feed the hungry.

The 10:00 a.m. Thanksgiving Day service will mark the end of a month-long drive for contributions to World Vision International, a non-profit agency which combats world hunger.

The Chapel sought contributions by giving out "love loaves" — small cardboard boxes shaped like loaves of bread. The boxes are used as banks. Each family sought to fill one with contributions during the month.

The loaf-shape is intended to remind Christians of Christ's miracle of feeding the multitude with only five loaves of bread, symbolizing that even a small gift may help others.

Compensation time okay to make up religious holidays

From the Civil Service Commission

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new law gives federal workers the option of working compensatory time to make up for time taken off work to observe religious holidays.

The Federal Employees Flexible and Compressed Work Schedules Act of 1978 provides that government workers may work compensatory time hours equal to time taken from the normal work schedule for religious reasons. The compensatory time may be worked before or after the time off, but must be completed within a reasonable period.

The law contains no restriction on the kind of religious holiday or observance the worker may get time off for. The worker may ask for time off, and the opportunity to make it up in compensatory time, for any personal religious belief.

The law does provide that an agency may deny a request for time off for religious observances if it interfered with the agency's ability "to efficiently carry out the mission of the agency."

Memorial services held for soldier

Memorial services were held Friday for Pvt. John H. Coyne, formerly of the 7th Student Company at MMCS. The 19-year-old soldier was fatally injured when he was struck by three vehicles on Huntsville's Memorial Parkway near Leeman Ferry Road Nov. 15.

A native of Michigan, Coyne's remains have been sent to his family there.

KROOP TALK

Pvt. Michael Green, 4th S.C. — "Being a volunteer Army I think it's made up of people looking for a skill. I know a lot of people that are using it as a way to save for college — using the college education fund. And I think it's an enjoyable thing to serve the country. There's still a lot of patriotism in the American youth."

SSgt. Albert Borsella, Co. A — "Today's soldier, in my opinion, is very lax, doesn't care about his job. He's only here to get a paycheck. To be fair, there are a few good soldiers and they're the ones carrying the ball."

Sp5 Elton McEwen, MIRCOC — "The soldier of today can't take it like they could back in '69. They're a bunch of lightweights. Added to the loss of benefits, this is why the morale is down in the Army."

2d Lt. Richard Lockwood, Co. C — "I haven't had much contact with the enlisted men, but the ones I've talked to seem to be highly motivated, reasonably intelligent and enthusiastic about what they're doing. The same applies to the officers I'm going to school with. There are a few I don't think too much of, but I think 90 to 95 percent will make good leaders."

Maj. Craig Ailles, Co. A — "I've heard both arguments — that the quality is lower and that it's higher. But I don't see a real difference in the quality now as opposed to 10 or 10,000 years ago. The quality of a soldier still depends upon the motivation of the individual, the quality of his training and the examples set by his superiors."

Army Sec. Alexander defends 'voiceless GI's'

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Citing some criticism from outside the Army as misdirected, Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander, Jr., called on critics to direct their comments elsewhere — and "not on the backs of voiceless GI's."

Alexander made these remarks at the Union League Club luncheon today in New York City.

In commenting on external criticism, the secretary said he would not stand for the enlisted soldier being made into a "scapegoat for the socio-economic ills of our society."

Admitting the Army has problems, Alexander said "I wish our critics would keep their sights on the right targets — and our soldiers are not the right targets." He added, "if a young black man joins the Army because unemployment is running at 30 or 40 percent among his peers, where is the story? Is it that another black American has joined the Army or is it the reason that the economic conditions in that man's community are unacceptably bad?"

Expressing concern over critics of the Army who say the "quality of our soldiers is declining," Alexander emphasized the fact that "fully 40 percent of today's young men do not meet the standards to qualify for entry into the Army. Many of those who meet the entry standards cannot adjust to the demands of Army life. The Army is made up of those who are qualified and who can cope."

"The Army is in a better state of readiness now than five years ago, not worse," he commented.

Alexander pointed out that some of the men and women who've enlisted "are disappointed to find that the opportunities they have heard about — a chance for education, skill training and the like — are not handed to them on a silver platter; they have to work for them." He continued, "the Army is not a free ride."

Reflecting on internal criticism, Alexander expressed hope that they would not be reluctant to comment when a matter was being discussed. "I want problems to be discovered and I want people in responsible positions — from squad leader up — to use all the resources at their disposal to solve those problems."

Of the Army's civil servants, Alexander said, "the myth of the government as a bloated bureaucrat standing in the way of progress is terribly unfair." They do an "outstanding job in a variety of essential activities."

Other challenges facing the Army include recruiting people for Reserve units and effective utilization of the Army's budget. Alexander pointed out "that too many leaders of Reserve units had become overly dependent on draft-inspired recruits." To overcome manpower shortages in the Reserves, innovative training and pay incentives are being tried.

Emphasizing that the most important element of the Army is the people and their needs, Alexander concluded, "to carp about supporting people needs would be the most destructive thing we as a society could do to our Army. People costs are the wisest double-barreled investment we can make. We enhance our security while, at the same time, providing adequately for those among us who have chosen to serve."

New procedures for merit promotion

The MIRCOM Civilian Personnel Division is preparing to issue new procedures regarding the list of best qualified candidates for jobs under the merit promotion and placement program.

Under the new procedures people who apply and are determined to be best qualified, then decline a valid job offer or interest or availability, will be removed from consideration and from further referral for the life of that register.

The practice is now, and has been in the past, that life of the register is 180 days from date of establishment of the best qualified list of names.

As the current system works, three to five or up to 10 persons may be referred on a list for one vacancy, yet there may be 10 others who are also best qualified. If persons are among the top 10 of the 20, the same 10 that keep declining will prevent the next 10 from getting referred because they are, in effect, selecting their jobs.

Personnel officials say that the declination rate runs about 50 percent, especially in the clerical field. People decline as they wait for more glamorous jobs, better locations, for car pool considerations and other factors.

The new procedure will give persons listed below the top 10 an opportunity to move up and be referred for vacancies.

Once a name is removed from the register, it cannot appear on another of the same series and grade until there is another merit promotion announcement, the person reapplies, and is determined to be among the best qualified.

Some merit promotion applicants must submit talent bank sheets

Civilian Personnel officials are calling attention to the portion of merit promotion announcements that outlines the necessity for a copy of the worker's talent bank sheet to be attached to the merit promotion application if the person is not registered in the local talent bank program.

In addition, if there are additional qualifications data that should be included in the talent bank sheet, or that the worker wants to be considered in the evaluation process, documentation of such must also be attached to the merit promotion application or it will not be accepted at a later date.

At the same time a copy of the talent bank sheet, and any change, are attached to the merit promotion application, the original of the sheet or any change should be forwarded to the talent bank office in CPD to insure the candidate's registration or update in the program.

The copies that go with the merit promotion application will not be sent to the Talent Bank Office, but will be used as a "fast track" method of evaluating a worker's skills.

Personnel officials say that it normally takes from four to six weeks to establish basic registration and/or any change in the talent bank program. Also, 946 workers or 10 percent of the workforce are not registered in this program.

For those workers not registered and who do not attach a copy of the talent bank sheet to their merit promotion application, consideration will not be given and the application will be returned unused. Workers should be reminded that it is their responsibility to register in the Talent Bank Program, Personnel officials have stressed.

Formerly, information from the talent bank and worker's 201 files (for those not registered) was used to evaluate candidates for vacancies, but this could lead to screening inequities, officials point out. The use of the talent bank sheet will insure a common qualifications source document for all workers who apply under the merit promotion program.

The requirement for the talent bank sheet has been in force for several months, but some personnel are failing to read the full first page of announcements that set forth details, according to CPD officials.

Shoppers beware!

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) officials last month asked installation Commanders to crackdown on shoplifters by revoking more exchange privileges, according to AAFES officials in Dallas.

Chief General Counsel for AAFES, Col. Gordon Ginsburg, said Commanders were told last month through AAFES channels that regulations require a mandatory shoplifting penalty of at least six months suspension of exchange privileges.

Something No "For Sale" Sign Should Be Without.

When a home displays the Gold Bond Protection Seal, it assures that most major systems, plus certain built-in appliances, will work for one full year after you buy the home (or longer, depending upon the terms of your contract) or they'll be repaired or replaced.

And that works to the advantage of both buyer and seller.

For the seller, it's a good selling point — and tangible proof that many of the home's important features will be kept in working condition.

For the buyer, it takes a lot of worry out of purchasing what is probably the family's biggest investment.

Call us soon for more information. And if you're planning on buying a home, look for the Gold Bond Seal. It tells a lot of good things about the house it protects.

Yes, the Gold Bond Protection Plan™ is something no "For Sale" sign should be without. And, it's exclusively yours at Gallery of Homes.

Co. C captures Western Conference championship

By LARRY PAUL

"Our team consists of half officers and half enlisted men. I think because of our officer-enlisted ratio, we tend to play better as a team. We don't get hot-headed or fall under stress," commented Phillip Goodwin, Athletic and Recreation NCO and player for Company C's Flag Football team.

Co. C completed the season here recently with a 9 and 3 record which put them in first place in their division. Co. C is now holding its own in the troop football playoffs which have the top four teams from the East and West division competing against each other. Students going through various courses at the Missile and Munitions Center and School (MMCS) form the officer portion of their team.

"Our offense for the first 6 games was really on the move," Goodwin said. "We won the first six, then we hit a slack time, and our defense started picking up. So, through the rest of the season, each part of our team was helping carry the other."

Unlike normal teams who get injured players throughout the season, Co. C was faced with a unique problem.

"After our six-game winning spree we lost some of our officer players who had finished their course and moved on to another post. That really hurt us, but we had to rebuild a team again, and we did it," said Goodwin.

"We're finally clicking again," said Rich Malinofsky, Co. C's quarterback, "and we have a lot of teamwork. I think the possibility is there to win the playoffs."

"What tends to make our team unique," added Goodwin, "is the fact that we can't organize the team on short notice. You see, you don't normally see some of the players during the day except at mail call."

When asked how the team was able to finish in the number one spot for the division, Goodwin answered, "Most of the teams we've played tend to depend on either a running or passing game, but we use both throughout our games."

Malinofsky added, "I think with the maturity behind our teams helps: we're able to play a tighter ball game. Most of our players are senior grade personnel."

They also get support from the stands. According to Malinofsky, "We get quite a few people who regularly come to our games. This helps us enjoy a victory better, and also take a defeat a little easier."

But the attitude of the team was shown when Goodwin stated, "Our team isn't totally win-oriented. Basically, we're out to play a good game and have a good time. We enjoy playing football, just to play the sport."

Co. A takes flag title in Eastern Conference

The Company A flag football squad lost only two games on their way to Eastern Conference championship. The 7th Student Company (10-5) took a 9-8 decision and the 291st MP Co. (11-4) became the only team to hold the champs scoreless in a very physical 8-0 contest.

However, both teams had fallen to Co. A earlier in the season, as did every other team in the Company Level Flag Football League. With 13 wins and two losses the Alpha Assassins averaged more than 19 points per game while their defense surrendered a meager five points per contest. Disregarding their single win by forfeit, they held their opponents scoreless seven times.

The team's coach, Kenneth Elms, credits the company's people and overall sports program for much of his team's strength. "We have the bulk of the lower ranking permanent party enlisted men on post. We don't lose as many players in a season as the student companies. And since the company supports sports, we have no problem getting our people out to practice."

The coach had mixed emotions about the team's two defeats. "I have no complaints about the loss to the 7th. That was a clear-cut defeat. On that day they just outplayed us.

"But the referees didn't control our game against the MPs. Something's wrong when you have a quarterback hit so many times he's bleeding from the nose and mouth and no flags are thrown."

However, Elms had no complaints with the MP team. "They're a good team — super aggressive. The MPs fit us just right. We're both aggressive teams."

As of this writing, Co. A is undefeated in tournament play and has hopes of cementing the post championship in tonight's game. One thing is certain — Alpha will be there and they will be tough.

Hunters fell 26 buck deer to start season

Hunters killed 26 buck deer in the first weekend of the arsenal gun hunting season.

Military personnel and their guests will be afield on Thanksgiving Day. The next Military-Civilian hunts are scheduled for the coming weekend.

Active duty military, retired, reservists if on active duty and foreign military personnel assigned here who desire to hunt tomorrow can sign up for a hunting area today in the Outdoor Recreation Center starting at 9 a.m. Each may take two guests.

Reservations for the Nov. 25 and 26 hunts will be taken Nov. 24 beginning at 0430. Assignment of hunters is first come first served. Half the spaces in each area are held for military, the other half for government civilian employees and contractors with arsenal vehicle tags and security badges. No guests are permitted on the Saturday and Sunday hunts.

Three bucks fell to gunners on the first day of the season but heavy rains cut the turnout. Fifteen were taken Saturday and eight more Sunday.

On both weekend days everyone who applied got to hunt and most went to their areas of first choice. About 250 hunters went through the check station Saturday morning. When flight test ranges were unexpectedly made available for assignment late Friday, the staff at the Outdoor Recreation Center allowed deer hunters to switch into the range areas Saturday if they wanted to. Many did since the ranges annually yield the majority of the deer shot on post.

Deer hunters register at the Outdoor Recreation Center

This is the first season in many years when assignment of hunting areas has been done first come, first served rather than by drawing or computer selection.

A random sampling of opinion from military and civilian hunters checking through Saturday morning indicated they were pleased with the new method.

A few individuals stood in line for two hours Friday morning waiting for the Outdoor Recreation Center to open at 4:30 so they could be sure of getting their first choice of hunting areas on Saturday and Sunday. Those who did, said they'd sleep later next time since there appeared to be enough spaces available to accommodate all hunters and the Center staff made the assignments quickly.

Famous soprano sings for Germans

By RAY ROWDEN

German servicemen, their families and friends filled the Playhouse at the Von Braun Civic Center Nov. 14 for the performance of international lyric soprano Anneliese Rothenberger.

With the piano support of the noted conductor and accompanist Dr. Guenther Weissenborn, Rothenberger sang 26 selections from classic composers Franz Schubert, Robert Schumann, Hugo Wolf, Johannes Brahms and Richard Strauss. The power, depth and control of her recital left the very appreciative audience with no doubt as to why she is one of the most respected performers in opera.

Her engagement here, as well as one in El Paso, Texas, was arranged by the German Ministry of Defense for the entertainment of their military personnel. Her career has included performances at La Scala, the Vienna State Opera, the Hamburg State Opera, New York's Metropolitan Opera, the Salzburg and Munich Festivals as well as appearances on British and U.S. television and in two British films.

During recent years Rothenberger has hosted a highly rated nation-wide television show in Germany.

The career credits of Dr. Weissenborn are also impressive. He has conducted the Halle, Hannover and Goettingen Symphonies and has been a professor of music at Detmold Conservatory since 1947.

BMD retirees return to Research Park facility

Some 40 military and civilian retirees from the Army's Ballistic Missile Defense (BMD) Program returned to BMD Headquarters in Research Park for BMD Retirees Day.

Among the retirees were Col. H. H. Northington and Brig. Gen. Ivey O. Drewry. Drewry headed BMD activities in Huntsville from 1962 until 1969 when he retired as Deputy Program Manager and Commander of the Sentinel System Command, which was formed to deploy the free world's first BMD system, later to become Safeguard.

Northington, who directed Sentinel site activation efforts, retired in 1968 and was the "oldest" retiree present in terms of retirement date.

The retirees heard about the latest developments in BMD systems and advanced technology and activities at Kwajalein Missile Range in the Pacific, used as a testing site for the U.S. Intercontinental Missile Force as well as BMD. Afterward, they were joined for a Dutch-treat luncheon at the Redstone Arsenal Officers Club by an equal number of friends still active in the program.

DDT discovered

internal organs and fat, portions of the bird usually discarded rather than eaten by humans, he noted.

The problem of DDT contamination on the arsenal came to light last year after Army tests showed it still present in the vicinity of the manufacturing plant operated here by a private concern from 1947 to 1970.

The tests also showed high levels of DDT in fish from the Tennessee River in the vicinity of the arsenal. The Environmental Protection Agency said that the fish should not be eaten, since they exceeded the federal tolerance of 5 ppm allowable in fish sold in interstate commerce.

A major effort has been underway to seal off the area of the former manufacturing plant and prevent DDT from being washed from the site in storm drainage. Most incoming drainage has been rerouted from the old plant site by a network of ditches and known beds of contamination have been sealed over with clay and planted in vegetation to prevent erosion.

Within the next few months an activated carbon filter is to be installed at the site to filter out any DDT that may still be escaping in drainage water. Once the filter is in operation, DDT residues at the site will be excavated and buried in an approved landfill. There will also be a program to test surface and ground water to insure that DDT residues are not carried off the arsenal.

SHAWL

program with excellent results," Zecher explained, saying that tests at Fort Benning, Ga., had been impressive. "We've demonstrated the feasibility of two warheads and tested the warheads against brick and reinforced concrete targets."

Tests to date have utilized LAW-T equipment which was the in-house development program at Redstone leading to Viper.

SHAWL, being developed on technology already available with Viper, will be a look-alike but is not a Viper replacement. This is in keeping with MIRADCOM's new modular evolutionary development concept, that is, striving to meet the threat by first building on existing systems.

"That's one of the beauties of the new system," Zecher explained. "The Army can use the same tooling and assembly line that Viper uses, yet give the soldier a new weapon and capability he does not have right now."

And no additional training would be required. Anyone who can fire Viper could fire SHAWL.

Zecher said the Army this year plans to complete the design and demonstrate the system using Viper components. Next year, SHAWL likely will go into a shootoff competition at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.; against three other systems contending for the infantry assault role.

"Competition will show what is available for the assault role and enable the Army to give the soldier the best possible weapon," Zecher said. "All weapons will be tested under the same conditions during the shootoff."

Supporting the SHAWL program at Redstone, in addition to ASCO, are the Propulsion Directorate, Test and Evaluation Directorate, and "Skunk Works." MIRADCOM is working with the Army Armament Research and Development Command on the warhead and fuze.
